Publication edited by Iwona Barańska and Makary Górczyński presents a collection of essays in urban planning, monuments protection and spatial policies prepared by the international group of European scholars: historians, art and architecture historians. Our contribution to the European urban history studies is a result of the 2015 International Conference held in Kalisz, Poland, EU. The book is devoted to the Polish early twentieth-century experiences in reconstructions of historic towns mostly, but it also includes studies covering various European initiatives in this field, from France to Russia or the Balkans.
